GEN. GOICOURIA.-This enterprising Cuban gen tleman, having given over President Walker to hardness of heart and head, has tendered his invaiuable services to President Comonfort. According to the statement of El Heraldo, confirmed by private information from the Mexican capital, he has already started two important projects, bearing on the ercial and industrial interests of Mexico, and, ing from what some of the letter writers say, has a strong notion of proposing to take the Spanish question on contract! His other projects, however, are really worth mentioning.

In the first place the Mexican Government has contracted with Gen. Goicouria for the establishment of a new line of steamers to run between New Orleans and Vera Cruz, touching at Tampico. El Heraldo remarks that this important enterprise, to which the Government lends its favor with much earnestness, will facilitate the communications of the country with the United States and with Eu-

The other project relates to colonization, and it is stated that the Mexican Government has contracted with Gen. Goicouria for the introduction into the republic of colonists, to whom grants of land will be mide on very liberal conditions. The Mexican journal, from which we have already quoted, expresses its confidence, based on the known energy and tact of Gen: Goicouria, that a very large numbe brought into the country. We of course heartily wish the General success in these legitimate and important undertakings. We are glad, indeed, that a gentleman of means with such a decided proclivity for forming and reforming States has found so promising a field for the exercise of his tastes.

MR. DICKENS AS A CONTROVERSIALIST. - The press of this country is giving great currency to Mr. Die s reply to the strictures of the Edinburgh Review upon his "Little Dorrit." We hardly think that the reputation of Mr. Dickens as a man of sense and intellect will profit by the courtesy. There was much to be said in answer to the Review, enough to overwhelm it utterly, but, in our opinion, Mr. Dickens, in his reply, has sald but little of it, and that not worthily. He has not done justice to himself, in a two-fold sense. Mr. Dickens is plainly no controversialist. He never could have been a great one, and his habits as a novelist have effectually extinguished whatever early aptitude for discussion he may have possessed. He belongs to a different rank of intellect. His mind is small, intense, genial, quick, and bright, but lacks the grasp and energy of a first-rate thinker. It is an exquisite pocket-glass, reflecting a subject by parts, stead of a grand speculum, mirroring it at fill length. It is a living fountain, but not many folintains expanded into a lake. We doubt if he is capable of producing anything of a controversial sort which in comparison with his achievements in his proper sphere would not seem excessively tame and feeble. His impotence as a polemic resembles that of our own Patrick Henry as a writer. The greatest American orator was not more powerless with the pen than the greatest English novelist is with the pen of a disputant. Ne sutor ultra crep!dam, is good advice for all ranks of genius.

THE MASONIC FAIR .- The preparations for the Grand Fair to be held next week in the Masonic Temple are of the most magnificent description. The great Hall of the Temple will be made a complete Fairy Palace. The ladies and geutlemen who are engaged in this enterprise are determined to spare no pains in combining every attainable attraction of their entertainment during the week. It will with question be a very splendid affair.

U. S FAIR-TROTTING WEIGHTS .- At a meeting of the committee of the U. S. Fair, Aug. 28th, it was resolved that the horses are to go to haruessthe driver and sulky to weigh not less than three hundred pounds.

For Wheeling .- The fine steamer John Gault, Capt Bunce, will leave for Parkersburg and Wheeling today. The Gault has elegant accommodations and good officers.

Capt. Parr's new steamer Tempest will leave for Nashville to-day. The Tempest is an out-andout Louisville boat, was built and is owned here, and Capt. Parr is a citizeu of Louisville. This is her first trip. She is of very light draught, and affords good accommodations. She will take freight and passengers for all points between this and Smithland, and along the Cumberland river.

The fine packet Tempest leaves for the Tennesses river to-day. She will also attend to all way busi-term. Crinoline and painted faces abounded. Young ladies sighed and simpered, and young gentlemen twisted their moustaches and twirled their cains with the utmost satisfaction. We know of no better place for the study of human nature than is afforded by the nightly throngs at the Mechanics' Institute.

But there are other and more material subjects for consideration. Let us instance the long array of ploughs from the manufactory of Brinly & Davis, Simpsonville. These gentlemen have rendered themselves famous by the superior article of plough which they make. It has taken the premium wherever exhibited, and justly become entitled to the first place in the affections of our farmers.

Turning from the Agricultural Departme our attention is almost instantaneously drawn to the exhibit of and oils made by Win. Stene & Co. That firm manufactures an article which cannot be surpassed in the West. It is as transparent as sperm, free from smell, and burns with a light as brilliant

GEO. W. P. Custis .- The arrival of this distinguished connexion of General Washington to attend the Natainal Fair is anticipated with a good deal of interest. It is due to him and the entire West that he be received with all possible honor.

Our readers may not know that there are among our citizens several relatives of this distinguished gentleman. They are perhaps the only persons in this section of the country who have any relation with the Washington line. Our friend Mr. J. G. Dodge, of 501 Main and Broadway, below Sixth, has the peculiar honor of being a near connexion of the eminent patriot who is expected to-day. In this land, where birth and lineage do not form the rank of any man, but in-born patriotism and energetic action in behalf of one's country make the best title to honor and respect, it is well that every one should entertain with due feelings of pride his honorable ARNOULT'S FRENCH READER .- We have had for some time a copy of a very valuable work appertaining to the study of the French language. It is by Professor Arnoult, the instructor in French at Harvard College, and is the most perfect simplification of the pronunciation and grammatical construction of that tongue we have ever seen.

Prof. Arnoult is a very skillful and accomplished teacher, and the success that has attended his efforts as a preceptor is a sufficient guarantee of the excellence and importance of the present volume.

Many think that Mr. Dickens has committed an impropriety in coming out in defense of himself against the criticism of the Edinburgh Review. There can be but little doubt that he was not the man

The jailor of Cleveland, Ohio, discovered few days ago a plan among the prisoners to escape. They had very nearly succeeded in carrying it out, and had it beeu permitted to progress a day longer, it would have proved successful.

The telegraph line along the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad, from Cincinnati to St. Louis, has been completed, and messages were sent through vesterday.

JUST THE THING FOR THE CITY .- Among the curiosities of the Mechanics' Institute is Speer's Weather Strip and Lock combined, an invention that has long been needed, as nothing of the kind has heretofore leen presented to the public that would keep the rain, wind, and dust from entering the joints. This invention does it to perfection, and at the same time locks the window with security. It is well known that it has been impossible to construct a weather strip that would effectually exclude a driving storm. Speer's lock does this to perfection, and at the same time locks the door and window in the most secure manner.

Mr. R. Burge, who ownes the fine block of iron frout houses in this place, on Main below Seventh. has secured this improvement. It is also used in the Patent Office and General Post Office at Wash-

We are gratified to learn that the proprietors of our principal hotels have assured the Committee of Reception that their charges, during the fair, will be the same as heretofore-in other words, that they are no extortioners, but have the clear ring of the genuine metal in them. This is as it should be, but nothing more than we and our citizens had confidently expected.

Læfner, who killed his wife and Mr. Horton at Cincinnati and then attempted to destroy .himself, has shown symptoms of insanity.

TRUST COMPANY CHECKS .- Certified checks and certificates of the Trust Company varied in price in Cincinnati from 70 to 90 cents on the dollar, with more sellers than buyers at the latter figure. A large creditor of the bank sold $10,000 at 75 cents, payable in two years, without interest.

Mr Smead, of the Citizens' Bank, obtained first class real estate mortgages for the amount of his deposit ($95,000) in the Trust Company Bank.

The Trust Company continued to liquidate its liabilities by exchanging notes for checks and certificetes of deposits. The settlements made in this way, up to the present time, amount to $500,000, being one-fourth of the entire indebtedness to depositors in the Bank and Trust departments of the principal office.

Kanawha Bank paper was selling at 40@50 cents on the dollar. No difficulty experienced in obtaining the latter price.

[Cerrespondence of the Louisville Journal.] FASHIONABLEINTELLIGENCE FASHIONS FOR SEPTEMBER. OPENING OF THE FALL SEASON.

New York, August 25. The third week in August has generally witnessed the return of many of our citizens to town, and great activity in the jobbing departments of trade. The lateness of the summer season has however greatly retarded the preparations for autumn, and as yet few of the residents have returned to the city, and little heep ecouplished by wholesale merchants. the canal and remain here during the week to accommodate strangers.

Mr. Judge, of the Fanny Bullitt, has our thanks for the latest New Orleans dates and copies of her manifest and memorandum. The Fauny will leave for New Orleans on Tuesday next.

Mr. J. Thompson Reeder, of the Statesman, has our thanks for a copy of the manifest.

The Mechanics' Institute.—Last evening the attendance at the Mechanics' Fair was not very large, but fashionable in the strictest use of that term. Crinoline and painted faces abounded. Young fashion and taste.

Besides the single item of silk dress goods, the styles in plainer materials are very rich and attractive, including many decided novelties in combination and design. In this letter, without going much into detail, I will try to give a general outline of the most striking features offered in the various departments. lepartments:

QUILLE AND FLOUNCED ROBES, VALENCIAS, PYRAMID

DELAINES.

The pertinacity with which flounced robes retain The pertinacity with which flounced robes retain their hold upon public favor is something remarkable, and can only be accounted for from the fact of the wonderful skill and ingenuity shown in the variety and beauty of the combinations. Every month some particularly wise person will assert that flounces are among the things that were, and still with every succeeding month we are assured by merchants that ware goods of this style are sold. nerchants that more goods of this style are sold than any other; and the demand continues unabated.

Nevertheless the quille or pyramid robes created a considerable diversion, the mode being at once so novel and so distingue that it is not surprising to see t adopted in all the more costly materials, and arranged in such infinite variety as to be in no danger ranged in such number variety as to be in no danger of producing a surfeit.

The most prominent come in plain taffetas, very heavy in texture, and in rich shades of brown, Maria Louise blue, purple and green. The pyramid or sidestripe is composed of rich black velvet exquisitely wrought in leaves and flowers. These are sometimes surrounded by a scroll or vine border, or hy an arabesque pattern. A narrower border of the ame description accompanies each robe as a trimming to the waist and sleeves.

Superb brown, blue, and drab motre antique have a side stripe of fancy plaid in very gay and striking colors, producing a very striking and brilliant effect. Exceedingly pretty but less expensive dresses are made of small checkered silk, black, brown, or green, mixed with white, and a quilles, or striped at the side with two widths of bright plaid ribbon, in which cherry is the predominating color. Of course the waist and sleeves are trimmed to correspond, the sleeves being a plain jockey, and the body high, without basques, and finished with ribbon braces.

The latest imported novelty was found in a robe of brown taffetas, with three rather deep flounces of black and white checkered silk, terminating in fringe Down each side of the flounces was a side stripe in brilliant plaid, combining a novel idea with a very brilliant plaid, combining a novel idea with a distinguished effect.

With rare exceptions, the patterns for flounced robes are all designed in velvet, combining an im-mense variety of rare and beautiful styles. A most exquisite combination was formed in a very delicate shade of drab, with fine bayadere stripes of rich mallord velvet, bordered with one an inch and a quarter wide, which terminated in fringe of the same shade. The contrast between the rare mallord, so warm, and glowing with the pure silvery tint of the silk centre, was more felicitous than could be imagined. Some of the designs are in flowers, surrounded by a tracery of the most exquisite foliage; others still are in the pointed pyramid form, and composed of alternating marrow velvet, bayadere stripes ords of satin of the same shade at the centre of the

The most fashionable bayadere silks come in solid colors, and are more elegant than the chene, and embossed stripes in fancy colors which were obtained last season. Superb white, pink, and blue robes are brocaded in wide bayadere stripes the size and pattern of a flounce. This decoration is of course the same shade as the groundwork of the robe, but the beauty and perfection of the workmanship enable it to stand out with distinct and distinguished effect. In less expensive styles the stripes are much narrower and composed of fine corded satin, forming a stripe an inch and a half in width, with the same space between of plain silk. These come in all colors, and make a very handsome costume, the prevailing hues being brown, hlack, and green.

The extent and variety in which valentias have been imported is a significant proof of the popularity evident these excellent goods obtained last season. The most fashionable bayadere silks come in solid

The new styles are much handsomer than any which have preceded them, both in texture and design. Prominent among them are plain drabs, and horders of the finest quality, plaided in very wide sections and gay colors; others are flounced, the patterns being worked in fancy-colored chenille, while still others possess the inevitable side stripe, which will doubtless be developed in every material of which dresses are composed. Already it figures largely in the mousselin de lutines, which en passant are otherwise remarkably handsoine, and will doubtless become a favorite material for home toilette. Another peculiarity deserves particular notice, it being entirely new and strikingly original.

Most of the designs are in exceedingly wide stripes and mixed palm leaf patterns entirely too large to be used for basque or sleeves without producing an outre appearance, which is also very unbecoming. To obviate this difficulty the part intended for the waist and sleeves is designated in a small, arbitrary palm leaf pattern, not mixed with any other design, and to still further increase the singularity of the effect, the color of the ground is entirely different to that of the skirts.

NOVELTIES IN SHAWLS, MANTLES, TRIMMINGS, BON-

NETS, AND JEWELRY.

If great industry, skill, and taste have been manifested in the dress-goods department, no less is exhibited in the immense number and variety of over garments with which our stores are already furnished.

stylish garment.

Another just introduced into New York is called the "Shetlaud" shawl, and is composed of fine woolen threads, netted by hand and forming a very light and graceful over garment, which possesses a sufficient amount of warmth to neutralize the ef-fect of the slight chill which succeeds the extreme warmth of summer. The lower part is arranged so as to present more the appearance of the circular than the shawl, which adds much to the beauty of the effect. They come principally in white and sub-

Superb chenille shawls are designed in chintz pattern, with black border and deep black fringe.

Plush comes in bright tints and is used principal-ly as a border to the plain drab and mixed centres. Its effect is heightened by being plaited in a variety of colors.

Its effect is neighbors.

create a furore among economical people.

We have mentioned in various letters the gradual We have mentioned in various letters the gradual tendency toward uniformity in colors, especially in street costumes. This tendency is now distinctly visible in most of the fashionable toilettes in preparation for the country season. A walking dress for September is composed of plain, dark green taffettas, with a perfectly plain but very full skirt (eleven inches is not considered too much), and a jacquette of the same material, cut in novel form, a basque back, with a circle front and very wide sleeves. It is trimmed with velvet, of the same color, and drop buttons, the whole costume preserving the strictest uniformity, with the exception of the hat, which must be of pink imperial lace, ornamented with pink ostrich feathers, tipped with maradout, undersleeves, and small collar of point d'angleterre. 'angleterre.

Little is known as yet respecting the fashional.

Little is known as yet respecting the fashionable modes in cloaks; those prepared for the jobbing trade are always old styles and not offered to city purchasers. I may, however, mention one in advance, because it is of so peculiar and striking elegance, and, to silence critics, we need only say that it has just been imported from Paris and is an exact copy of an imperial design.

The form is that of a circular, cut so as to fall over the arm like a very wide sleeve, entirely removing the ungraceful appearance which results from passing the arm under a circular cut in the ordinary mode. The material was fine drab plash o' such perfect quality as to combine the beauty of dinary mode. The material was fine drab plnsh o' such perfect quality as to combine the beauty of velvet and chentlle. This alternated with wide strips of plaid plush in very gay colors; thus, a wide strips of plaid down the center of the back, supported on either side by equally wide sections of the exquisite drab, then two more stripes of plaid, which form the shoulder, followed by sections of drab edged, with a border of plaid down the front, which is braced across with straps and buttons. The hood is the shape of a half handkerchief, with the corner folded square across organiemted by side correct of folded square across, ornamented by side corners of plaid plush, finished with fancy colored tassels. Heavy cord and tassels fasten it at the throat and are thrown back to give the appearance of the kilt. The whole effect is riant and superb, but requires to be worn with spirit and grace, and the should be otherwise elegantly costumed.

The prospect of an early and brilliant opera season has induced the preparation of a large number of opera cloaks in novel and distingue styles. Two of these challenge unbounded admiration and will doubtless take the lead. The first is a small shawl, circle cut very wide from the shoulders down, so as to form a sleeve something like the plaid cloak above described. The lower part is, however, hollowed in such a manner as to form two points, to which are appended handsome tassels. Hoods are universally appended handsome tassels. Hoods are madded, with cord and tassels at the throat. Another is also in the shape of a shawl circle, but has wide sleeves inserted. It is composed of fine white cashmere, bordered deeply with silver plush. Ileavy chenille tassels are suspended from the arms in front and habited, and the written arms. in front and behind, and the quilted lining is com-posed of cherry satin. This also gives the sleeves, which are trimmed to match the skirt. The center of the hood is quilted with white satin embroidered with silver plush, and finished with chenille tassels. With this cloak a hat is worn of rice straw, bordered with a deep lace and trimmed with one long cherry plume. Wide strings of white taffetas, bor-dered with inch strips of cherry velvet.

The latest importation of Parisian bonnets exhibits a decided effort at an enlargement over the face. with retreating sides, and a predominance of slop-ing crowns, which are however decidedly less popu-lar than the strait crowns. For promenade bonnets, the trimmings are almost exclusively comprised of feathers, uniform in the color with the bonnet. The prettiest style for September is a new lace called "V Imperatrice." It is precisely like a new trimming for mantles which originated last season under the same name, and was imported exclusively by one house in this city.

It comes in rich dark shades of brown, blue, and green, and is ornamented with full ostrich plumes of the same color tipped with marabout, which imparts an air of lightness and grace to it. A fall of lace over the front and a very full ruche are the only decretions inside if we except a tip of the feathers. orations inside, if we except a tip of the feathers, which is placed far forward so as to shade one side which is placed far forward 30 as to shade one side of the face. These lovely creations are from the hand of Madame Alexandrine, of Paris, and are im-ported solely by Madame Harris & Sons, of this city, whose establishment is celebrated for their unrivalwhose establishment is celebrated for their unitval-ed French manufactures and receives the support of all the celebrated artistes, including Madame La Grange, Vestivali, and Mrs. John Wood & Co. In trimmings great profusion is manifested and will not he confined to the edge or bordering of garments; trimmings great profusion is manifested and will not he confined to the edge or bordering of garments; indeed, the disposition seems not to be, not so much a matter of taste or beauty of effect, as to pile on a vulgar quantity quite regardless of condition or consequences. It is to be hoped the good taste of American ladies will soon correct this evil.

An exceedingly beantiful novelty in decoration is imported as an ornament to the sides of the skirts of plain silk dresses, and can be adapted to all colors. It is composed of chenille formed into a side stripe of exquisite flowers and foliage, and is accompanied by a berthe for the low corsage, adapted to plain silk in fancy colors. This would be charming for an evening toilette.

In jewelry there is an extraordinary demand for rare and costly articles of bijouterte, and the most superb taste is exhibited in their manufacture. The establishment of Tiffany & Co. has acquired an enviable reputation for the execution of this delicate workmanship, and especially for the perfection of their bridal sets. A chef d'auvre of this kind was completed a few days ago, the cost of which was upwards of $100,000. It was composed almost entirely of diamonds of the purest water, with the exception of a small quantity of pearls introduced for a particular effect. The bracelets, broach, &c., were all exquisite, but the triumph of art was achieved in the cluster of gems which composed the "agrafes," which were intended to loop up the folds of the lace skirt. These are doubtless the most costly and perfect pieces of workmanship ever com-of the lace skirt. These are doubtless the most costly and perfect pieces of workmanship ever completed in this country.

We saw also a superb hracelet of diamonds, the exact counterpart of one worn by the Empress Eugenie. Diamonds set in black enamel are much worn and are greatly admired by married ladies of distinguished taste.

In demi-toilette, Florentine jewelry in a hroad Tuscan setting is greatly in vogue; many of which are copied from original articles of Tuscan and Pompeian jewelry. The shapes represent the hearts of men or animals in odd and grotesque forms; but sometimes also figures of the rarest classical beauty. Tiffany & Co. have on exhibition a crown made by them for Madame La Grange. It is composed of a double wreath of laurel leaves studded with acorns, and cost $500. They have also a vase presented to Commodore Stevens, worth $2,500; the Kane gold medal; and the Marcy testimonial from the merchants of New York, which consists of the most splendid dinner and tea sets ever made in the most splendid dinner and tea sets ever made in

A CONVENTION AT WASHINGTON - AMERICAN RAILEOAD IRON.-Gen. Duff Green, as chairman a committee appointed by a meeting of persons interested in railroads, and charged with the duty of bringing the subject before the Postoffice Department and before Congress, has issued a call for a convention in the city of Washington on the first Monday of January next, to be composed of delegates to be selected by persons interested in the manufacture of iron and in railroads. The leading subject of the convention is to effect an organization by which American iron can be supplied to our railroad companies at less cost than is now paid for foreign iron. General Green sets forth the proposed plan more fully, as follows:

He proposes "an organization, under acts of in-corporation in all the States from which they can be obtained, with sufficient capital, to be invested in ailroad bonds and other good securities; that it shall be the dnty of this association to act as trustee and agent for railroad companies in the sale of their se-curities, and, from the proceeds of such sales and beir own capital, to furnish funds to aid in the manafacture of iron for railroads; that there shall be a fixed duty upon iron, sufficient to protect the capital invested in its manufacture, and the corrency from the contingencies affecting the price of foreign iron produced by the financial policy of the Bank of England; that the laws regulating mail contracts be so modified as to authorise contracts with railroad companies for the permanent use of their roads; and that, instead of payments on contracts as now made, there be delivered to such companies coupon bonds, chargeable on the revenues of the Department, re-deemable at the pleasure of the Government, and bearing interest at the rate of two and a half per cent. for a sum the interest upon which at 5 per cent. bearing interest at the rate of two and a half per cent. for a sum the interest upon which at 5 per cent. would be equal to the payments made for such service under the present system; that the whole proceeds of the public lands be transferred to the postoffice fund; and that whenever the funds of the Department and the surplus in the treasury, beyond a sum to be fixed by law, will permit, it shall be the duty of the proper officer of the Government to purchase up at par such of these coupon bonds as may have been deposited, under the laws of any of the have been deposited, under the laws of any of the States, as a basis for bank issues, in the order of the registry of such bonds at the treasury by the banks making such deposit.'

The Union states that the same subject is now engaging the attention of the head of the Treasury Department, and he is at this moment occupied in the collection of facts and statistics with a view of recommending some legislation on the subject looking to the advancement of our own industry and of our own peculiar interests in this respect.

The comet discovered by Dr. Peters, at the Dadley Observatory, on the 25th of July, was seen at the Imperial Observatory, Paris, on the 28th, and at Gotha and Altona on the 30th. This establishes the priority of the discovery for the Dudley Observatory. Dr. Peters proposes to give the name of the "Olcott Comet" to his discovery.

Tit is stated that the work of constructing the Minnesota and Pacific Railroad will scon be commerced, and that from 500 to 1,000 men will be placed wpon the road between St. Paul and St. Anthony this fall. The ground will be broken as early as October, and by summer the iron horse will bound across the prairies like the wind.

NEW YORK CATTLE BROKERS .- Important to Western Dealers .- A case of difficulty has occurred in the New York cattle market about the right of a broker under certain circumstances to commission according to the usage observed among operators. The New York Tribune, in the absence of all laws on the subject, states the rules which are followed there as of interest to strangers who may hereafter send stock to that market:

If you consign your cattle to a broker, directing him to receive, pay freight, and make sales, and at-terward come on yourself and sell them at whole-sale, independent of the broker, he is entitled to commission for selling without guaranty. The com-mission ranges from $1 to $3 a head, according to eircumstances. If you should arrive with a drevc and apply to a broker, and he should assist you m getting your cattle off the cars, and paying freight, and advise you about selling, and you should then sell at wholesale, he would be entitled to commis-

REVOLUTION IN DRESS .- The Cayuga Dress Reform Society recently held a convention at Auburn, N. Y., and adopted the following resolutions:

Resolved, That as health is closely allied to dress, we, as reformers, adopt and leud our aid to carry into rommon use short skirts, loose waists, minus the whalebone, and any style which we deem comforta-ble and healthful.

Resolved, That we regard Paris fashions as a nuisance; and that we, as American free-born women, do discard them as such.

THE LAST PERFORMANCE OF HUME, THE ME-HUM.—We translate from the Baden Chronique an account of the last exploit of Mr. Hume, the Yankee spiritual medium abroad.

Mr. Hume, who is at Baden for five or six weeks werv much sought after in aristocratic circles, and prefers them to the public saloons, where he is the object of an inconsiderate and anuoying curiosity. One evening recently he went for the first time to the house of Madame K like any other man. to make a visit, and not with the purpose of exhib-ting his peculiar powers. On entering the parlor hume felt, all of a sudden, ill at ease. The attempts which he made to overcome his embarrass ment only augmented it. His nerves treinbled, he shuddered convulsively, and felt a choking sensa-tion. In vain he sought to compose himself; sweat stood in drops upon his forehead, and his teeth began to chatter as if with cold.

The persons present gathered around him asking

"Nothing, nothing," said he with emotion, "it is nothing," and making a great effort he moved about like a man who would escape a painful vision, wiped his face, seized his chair, with still trembling hand and pointing with his finger to the floor, cried out, as if inspired:

The listeners were amazed, and proceeded to in-quire if, in the apartment of the house occupied by Madame de K—, a crime had been committed. The people of the house were disturbed, and began by denying it. The master afterwards acknowledged that, six years ago, an unfortunate young gentleman of pleasure had blown his brains out and died in the of pleasure had blown his brains out and died in the most exeruciating torture. The affair had been help secret, lest a knowledge of it should prejudice people against the chamber where it had happened.

ARCHBISHOP HUGHES AND THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES .- Hon. Henry J. Raymond of the New York Times, who has recently returned from a visit to Europe, publishes a long and spicy letter in reply to the attack made upon him by Archbishop Hughes, in connection with the statement in the Times that the Archbishop was unpopular with the Catholic hierarchy, and would soon be removed. This statement was made while Mr. Raymond was in Europe, and the following is his defence upon that point:

Your assault upon me was committed while I was in Europe. You knew of my absence, for you allude to it in both your letters. You seem conscious that for such an attack upon an absent person the public for such an attack upon an absent person the public will require some excuse, and you profess to find one in the circumstance that an objectionable article appered in the Times of July 13, and that, as the editor of the Times, I am responsible for its publication. In a legal sense, perhaps, I am. If you had seen fit to consider it libelous and commence a suit for damages to character, I should undoubtedly have been the proper party to respond—because I am in part the owner of the paper in which it appeared. But when you seek redress, or revenge, by assailing personal character, the instincts of a gentleman, to say nothing of an Archbishop, should have taught you the absurdity of holding me to any such responsibility for what was done while I was three thousand miles away. You knew that I never saw or heard of the article in the Times of July 13—that I had no control over its publication, and no more morhad no control over its publication, and no more mor-al or personal responsibility for its appearance than you had yourself. It was quite competent for you to reply to it—to expose any misstatements it might contain, and to denounce, with just as much ve-hemence as you might choose, the parties who were hemence as you might choose, the parties who were accessory to its publication. Such a course, however, would not suit your "instincts." You must have a personal mark for your battery of billingsgate. A controversy concerning principles or facts is too tame and insipid for your refined, ecclesiastical tastes. You require some person to whom you can apply epithets, and upon whom you can exercise the only faculty which, in your case, does not decay with age, or lose auything of its vigor by constant use.

As to the article itself I have nothing to say. You As to the article itself I have nothing to say. Tou have replied to it in a style with which I hope you and your friends are perfectly satisfied. Upon some of the points involved I think it possible that you are right. I presume it is quite certain that you will never resign your office, until you are required or requested to do so; and that then you will. I am not prepared to say or show that you have ever treated with disrepent the newly promulgated docreated with disrespect the newly promulgated doctrine of the Immaculate Conception. I presume it is also quite true, as you assert, that "no ecclesiastic worthy of the name has ever pretended to rival the Archbishop either in talents or influence;" and that your authority over the priests and people of your diocese is quite as absolute and as arbitrary as you assert it to be. It is possible, also, that the bishops, priests, and other subordinates of your jurisdiction are as entirely satisfied with this state of things as you would have the public believe; and that the great mass of Roman Catholics, American as well as Irish, who are subject to your authority, are charmed with the delightful manner in which it is exercised, and pray for your continuance in power until "about the year 1879." If they do, it is not for Protestants to quarrel with their tastes, or question the sincerity of their petitions; the worst thing we could in fairness and courtesy wish them would be that they might be approach. could in fairness and courtesy wish them would be, that they might be answered. But with all this I have nothing now to do. The Times published the article referred to, and, whenever it feels under any necessity of so doing, the Times will probably sustain it. My concern at present is merely with the personal attack for which that article is made the

OPENING FESTIVITIES OF THE NEWHALL HOUSE AT MILWAUKIE.-We were honored with an invitation by Messrs. Kean & Rice, but were unable to attend. It took place on Tuesday evening last. One of the editors of the Chicago Tribune, who attended the celebration, says of the feast and the hotel

The great event of 1857, for this fine city, came off last evening, in the opening of the Newhall House, just completed. This is one of the finest, if not the finest hotel West of New York city. It is situated on the corner of Main and Michigan streets, and covers a lot 120 by 180 feet. It was built by Mr. Daniel Newhall, at a cost of $160,000, the lot being valued at $45,000, making a total investment of over $200,000. The building is five stories high, of Milwaukie brick, with richly ornamented stone caps over the doors and windows, and is surmounted by a tasteful curpola from which a fine view of ed by a tasteful cupola, from which a fine view of the whole city may be obtained.

The lower floor contains eight fine stores, barroom, billiard-room, barber-shop, bath-rooms, &c. The second floor contains a dining hall, 119 by 38 feet, which can be made into two rooms by sliding doors, and is handsomely freecoed; a main hall, or lobby, 138 by 23 feet, a number of spacious parlors, reading and smoking rooms, &c. The main hall is lighted by an iumense bay window, which projects over the main entrance door and is reached by a broad flight of steps leading from the street. From this hall two flights of circular and commodious stairways lead to the upper stories.

The house is furnished in the ver a cost of over $75,000. The drawing-room is magnificently appointed, and will compare favorably with any similar apartment in the best hotels in the nificently appointed, and the best hotels in the with any similar apartment in the best hotels in the east. Most of the furniture in the private parlors and sleeping apartments is black walnut, stained in initiation of cbony, and is very rich and handsome. Thus much briefly for the hotel, which is one of which any city in the Union might justly be proud. The citizens here had determined to open the hotel to the public in a manner commensurate with the importance of the event. A committee was entrusted with the management of the affair and every preparation was made for a brilliant festival. Au arched passage covered with canvas was constructed across Michigan street, connecting the hotel with Albany Hall, where the dancing took place. At midnight the immense dining hall was thrown open and the guests partook of one of the most elegant and sumptuous entertainments ever spread in the West. The table was crowded with good things of every name and kind, and ample justice was done to the sumptuously furnished tables. The bill of fare contained over one hundred different dishes, all served up in the very best manuer. The tables were importance of the event. A committee was entrusserved up in the very best manuer. The festival passed off without the slightest occurrence to mar the pleasure of the guests, and was certainly a most brilliant and successful affair.

Mine hosts of the Newhall, Messrs. Kean & Rice, are well known to the traveling public, and their names are sufficient guaranty that this hotel will be kept in the best manner. Mr. Kean was long the popular host of the Louisville Hotel, Louisville, Ky., and Mr. Rice has loug been connected with the American House, in Boston.

Pretended Fugitive Slave .- A colored man was found in the cars of the Fitchburg road, on Monday night, on his way to Concord; and, when asked for his ticket above the Waltham station, claimed that night, on his way to Concord; and, when asked for his ticket above the Waltham station, claimed that he had given it up to the conductor soon after leaving Bostou. He was teld that he had not done so, and that he was not in the car when the train left Boston. Not finding any ticket in his pocket, and being, as he said, without money to pay his fare, the conductor told him he had better get out—which he did at the next station. He immediately walked back to Waltham, and there told a story that the conductor had taken away his ticket for Concord, torn up a letter of introduction to a respectable person in that town, and had compelled him to leave the cars. A benevolent gentleman of Waltham, believing his story, harnessed up his carriage and tock the "fugitive" to Concord, where people were called up, and arrangements made to forward the "fugitive" to Canada in the morning. In the mean time he entertained his friends with an entirely new and novel story of a scuffle and fight with a Southerner, who attempted to seize him at Pawtucket, in which pistols were drawn, but no blood. On Tuesday morning, with a through ticket and money in his pocket, the fugitive was put on hoard the cars for Canada. The man is got rid of, but who he is or what he is nobody knows.—Bunker Hill Aurora.

Miss Hosmer,-A Nahant correspondent of the New York Mirror gives the following sketch of Miss Hosmer, the young American sculptress, who has just returned from Italy, and of her home at Water-

Miss Hosmer is not yet 27 years old, the only child of her father, and he a widower. Her American home is at Watertown, just in a curve of the Charles river, and looking a long way up. Her father is a physician, distinguished alike for his skill in his profession, his generosity to the poor, his unfinching integrity, his blunt honesty and independence. Ever generous and just, often gentle, kind, and most thoughtful, but politic never; in one word, what Diogenes vainly sought—an honest man.—"Like father, like daughter," say those who know Harriet Hosmer well. She is masculine in character and tastes, as she is in intellect, and well she may be—her mother having died in her early childhood, an only sister soon following, from having been brought up too carefully, as the stricken parent thought. The father's love and the physician's skill alike said, give this little frail girl a firm constitution, whatever else she may or may not have.—To row a boat with skill; to out-fish the fisherman; to shoot a bird upon the wing; to be much on the to shoot a bird upon the wing; to be much on the back of a fast horse—these, from being her health-giving exercises, became her accomplishments, her delights, while a favorite in-door amusement was "doctoring," not a rag-baby, hut a skeleton in her father's office! opening the wired jaws with her own little hands, to thrust down the pills she had prepared.

Then came a time when Hattie really "must begin to be a lady!" when the fashionable boarding-school to be a lady!" when the fashionable boarding-school to be a lady!" to be a lady!" when the fashionable boarding-school was found, the piano bought, the drawing lessons taken! But not to this dull routine would her free mind be chained. The piano and her first sketches were not her parlor's only evidences of her skill and taste. There were birds' nests of various kinds, with their different colored eggs; one a crow's nest, she climbed forty feet to secure, then having tied it to her back, slipped down the almost branchless trunk. Standing beside the nests, or perched upon the window casings, as if just alighted, are birds killed, cured, and stuffed by her own hands; Minerva's bird is perched over the door; beside which, on a rustic table covered with moss, her favorite white hen will ever stand surrounded by her chickeus; and hen will ever stand surrounded by her chickeus; and her pet kitten, mounted and wired by her own hands, stands ready to purr in the corner. At least five hundred species of butterflies, artistically arranged, form one picture, so to speak, between the front windows; various reptiles preserved in alcohol are her centre table ornaments; deer-antlers, with cured eggshells on the branches, are her candelabras; cured egg shells on the branches, are her candelabras; a blne-jay her inkstand; a turtle-shell, suspended by a chain, her card receiver; three half lemons trimmed with goldleaf, bound together, are her waferbox, sandbox, &c. Here, too, are her first efforts at drawing, painting, and in plaster (her first marble bust, Napoleon, is in her father's library). As we gazed around the parlor which her mind fashioned and her hands arranged, and felt the originality (to which pen of mine cannot do justice) of all its little details, we involuntarily did homage to her genius and felt a firmer faith in her future. and felt a firmer faith in her future.

How HE WAS SAVED .- The Newburyport Herald thus describes how young Stevens, a pilot of that harbor, was saved:

Almost immediately after his companions had re Almost immediately after his companions had re-tired below, as he was standing in the quarter with the spyglass to his eye, the main boom jibed over, striking him in the bank of the nack and sweeping him into the sea. Instantly the boat filled away and sailed off with a six knot breeze. He turned in pursuit; but one hundred yards swimming satisfied him that that was useless. He halloed; but the noise of the sails, the rushing of the waters, and the in-tervening decks shut off all communication. There he was in the midst of the ocean; the boat receding, and no friendly sail in sight; it is not desirable to die, and he lay for some time upon the surface, when, by and by, five miles away, a sail appears standing toward him—it is his only hope; a faint hope, but the last. He did not swim to her, but reserved his strength; and when she was within two miles it was evident that she was going a long way to the windows? to the windward.

He then coolly-oh, how can a man be cool with He then coolly—oh, how can a man be cool with the deep water below and nought but the deeper heavens above—coolly struck out to head her off. For three-quarters of a mile or more, he swam for dear life; but now he begins to fail. It's legs are already cold and stiff, and he hangs down deep, the waves breaking to his mouth. 'Tis the last chance; he raises his head and shouts; and a woman—a woman's cars are always one to the cry of distress: man's ears are always open to the cry of distress; God bless her—says, "I hear a voice." All hands look round. It is now or never; and as a last effort he stretches himself above the waves and says—"I am drowning." They hear—they see; "ease off sheets! up helm!! Man the boat!!" It is done as quick as said—quicker than written! "I shall drown," calls the brave, struggling, but sinking man, before the boat can row! The captain turns the craft full upon him, and minus of help gives the helm to his wife, while with a coil of rope he stands in the bows. The rowers pull strong, but many yards are yet between them and the sinking man, when the vessel's prownears the spot, and with the captain's call—"catch field," the rope falls upon his band and is turned around the wrist. The rope is ad and is turned around the wrist. The head and is turned around the wrist. Ine rope is paid out, the sails shake in the wind; and in two minutes more—after he had been in the water an hour and a haif—the captain and his wife pull him over the side, helpless, and for a long time clouded and wandering in mind.

With the first train, that reached here at noon on Monday, he was returned to his family—returned to startle, to gladden, to change! Great God, what a change! The fither with three score and ten upon him—the young wife stricken to the soul; the little children to whom home was gloomy—they can tell;

Anecdote of a Railroad Conductor -A writer in the Boston Post tells the following story of the veteran Barrett, who, for twenty-two years, was a conductor upon the Lowell Railroad, and is now a

A lady who had a boy with her considerably above the non-paying age, attempted the rather difficult exploit (in the anti-crinoline period) of hiding her precious son under her skirts. "Uncle John," who saw more bulk than he could account for by any ordinary theory of personal enlargement, carefully re-connoitered the pile, and, guessing the secret of the lady's extraordinary expansion, proceeded, without saving a word, to collect fare for one passenger and a half, and gave the lady her change, which, withsaying a word, to collect thre for one passenger and a half, and gave the lady her change, which, without looking it over, she put in her pocket. By-and-bye, observing that the boy was still kept in "durance vile," "Uncle John" humanely whispered in her ear. "You may as well let him out—you've paul for both!" The tradition is that there was some function to the read when they child was delivered. on the road when that child was delivered.

DUBBEOUNDERING.—A man of unblemished character was a candidate for a large constituency, and the following means were used to get rid of him. At a large public meeting an elector got up and said, "I demand the exercise of my right to ask that candidate a question. Will he answer me yes or no, like an honest man?" "Undoubtedly I will." A most incautions promise, as the reader will guess. "Well, then," said the elector, "I ask that gentleman, who killed his masherwoman?" What was the poor man to say? What yes or no could answer the question? Ile hesitated, he stammered—the meeting was against him: he was hustled out of the DUMBFOUNDERING .- A man of unblemished char question? The Florence correspondent of the London Morning Post tells this good story: "There is a story of an Imperial Highness waltzing thrice in the same evening with an English lady at the Court of Berlin. She naturally felt, and frankly expressed, herself highly flattered by the compliment. "I did not intend it as a compliment," was the answer. "Then," said the lady, somewhat rebuffed, "your Highness must be very fond of dancing." "I detest dancing," was the still unsatisfactory response. Undeterred by her ill success, our fair country woman still prosecuted her inquiries. "What, then, may I ask, can be your Imperial Highness' motive for dancing?" "Madam," was the exalted personage's reply, "I dance to perspire!"

[From the Leavenworth Times.] LAND SWINDLING IN KANSAS.

OSAWKEE, Aug. 11, 1857. This is to certify that we, the subscribers, had two claims located on the Delaware Trust Lands, at Grusshopper Falls, which were contested; that in accordance with the regulations of the sale we were obliged to submit our claims to a "Commissioner's Court," composed of Wilson Shannon, E. O. Perrin, and a Mr. Matthew, for arbitration; that the trial of one cause commenced on Friday afternoon and closed on Saturday, occupying one day and oue-half, for which these Commissioners charged one hundred dollars entrance fee, and six hundred dollars judgment; dollars entrance fee, and six hundred dollars judgment; and that the trial of the other case commenced and closed on Monday forencon, for which they charged seventy-five dollars entrance fee, and three hundred dollars for judgment; that the Commissioners were here for the purpose of trying contested claims, and that they named their own price after hearing the case, and refused to render judgment until we had paid these enormous charges, amounting in the aggregate to ten hundred and seventy-five dollars; that without submission to this extortion we could not obtain title to our property, and that the Governobtain title to our property, and that the Government appraisal of these claims is six hundred and forty dollars.

JAMES FRAZER.
ROBERT RIDDLE.

The Delaware land sale having been a systematic violation of the treaty with the Iudians, and a uotorious and palpable swindle throughout, we deem it very much in keeping with the general arrangements that there should be inside swindles—these ments that there should be inside swindles—these too containing private lies and sequestered nabings. The illegality in the first instance consisted in "squatting" on the trust lands at all; fraud No. 2 was the "Commissioner's Court," and the innermost swindle, so far as heard from, is that which provokes the outcry of Messrs. Riddle & Erazer. We presume these gentlemen are appealing to the public for a redress of the Shannon-Perrin grievance. Messrs. S. & P. doubtless deserve to be deprived of grog for a twelvemonth, but unfortunately there is no appeal from the "Commissioner's Court." The squatters eat the Indians and the Commissioners bolt the squatters—and there an end. It is only u difference in the size of fish.

COUNTERFEITERS, HORSE THIEVES, &c. - We hardly open an exchange that does not contain the arrest of a counterfeiter or horse thief. There seems to be a regularly-organized band all over the country, and they have headquarters in every city. Louisville is not exempted. Their plans are well known to the police. The bands are organized in different classes. The shrewdest only lay the plans of operations; they take no active part. It is there-Iore next to impossible that any of them can be caught, and, if arrested and brought to trial, they find no difficulty in procuring persons to do their swearing. But a few weeks ago a band of counterfeiters was detected in Indiana. Within a few days another has been nipped in the bud at St. Louis. The Democrat of that city, of Friday, has the following notice:

The Late Crim'nal Disclosure.—A deeper or more extensive scheme of villainy, arranged to plunder the community and enrich the knaves who have conceted and were successfully executing it, has rarely been disclosed than that brought to light during the been disclosed than that brought to light during the past week. Some ten thousand four hundred and uninety-five dollars of counterfeit bills have been scized by the police, and its possession fastened upon the guilty parties. One only, of the arrested, who is known to be guilty, has thus far eluded the law. With the bills was found much valuable jewelry, and a lot of church utensils of gold and silver chopped up. The details of the arrest and legal proceedings thus are before our readers, and merit their careful attention. They, however, scarcely indicate the startling nature of the facts in the case. The long continued and assiduous watchfuluess of the Chief of Police has detected the existence among us of a large party of dealers in spurious bank bills, of a large party of dealers in spurious bank bills, acting systematically with similar parties in the principal cities of the Union. They plan to make their fraudulent issues on the same day throughout the country, and in each city after banking hours.

The St. Louis crew are known to embrace men of respectability, engaged actively in honorable and lucrative callings. These gentlemen, unconsciously to themselves, are personally known. Their operations have been marked when they imagined no eye was upon them. The wells within which they have met have had ears. When they have traded in met have had ears. When they have traded in fraud and reckoned their iniquitous gains in shrewd disguises, birds of the air have carried the matter. Had it consisted with justice to have permitted the false ten thousand dollars to issue and be scattered through the community, these men would have felt the scourge of the law. But, for the sake of thousands of housest men, they are at present spared.

In the meantime the more daring instruments of their villainy well denbless be punished. There must precede, the disinterested, conscientious, and modest efforts of counsel to bewilder and scatter the prosecution, and by a skillful mingling of flattery and branch the country the the passe but the and bravado to lead the court by the nose, but the effort will probably fail. The case is too serious and the guilt too certain to permit the rogues known to be involved in it to escape through shrewd legal maneuvering.

It is scarcely necessary to say that the locality of It is scarcely necessary to say that the locality of the bills, jewelry, &c., lately dug up by officers English and Jackson in the old stone house near Carr and Grand avenues has for some time been known, approximately, by the mayor and the chief of police. Not long after the arrest, which was wisely kept secret, certain of the respectable gentle-nen, to whom we have alluded, were at Biebush's pasture, with a variety of articles, ostepsibly to law men, to whom we have alluded, were at Biebush's pasture, with a variety of articles, ostensibly to buy mules. They have thus been buying mules indelinitely, and have doubtless eujoyed it lingely. They since find that Biebush & Co.'s "mules" are below par.

The invincible Charley Ford, with whom the city marshal and the courts lately played cricket ball, was a cherished member of the lovely fraternity now exposed. As such he was thoroughly known to the marshal. The persistency with which the lutter, in the face of accumulating obstacles, sought for his conviction, is thus most honorably vindicated. To Mayor Wimer and to Marshal Rawlings, all who have become conversant with this and other recent. have become conversant with this and other recent police successes, join in awarding high praise.
